

True Friends

Ok, so you have hopefully interviewed and shared the pictures with many, many people, and now you are asking yourself what is the point? It is my hope that maybe you have found some true friends. What is a “true friend” you may ask? Well, maybe this will help:

- A true friend will be there when you need them.
- They will help you with your homework.
- They will share the cost of everything and not just wait for you to pay.
- They will tell you if you are wrong, even if you do not want to hear it.
- They will always listen to your problems.
- They will give you a gift and not expect anything in return.
- They will always encourage you to do the right thing.
- They will share the good times with you.
- They will share the bad times with you.

According to wiki friendship is the following:

The value of friendship is often the result of friends consistently demonstrating the following:

- The tendency to desire what is best for the other
- Sympathy and empathy
- Honesty, even in situations where it may be difficult for others to speak the truth
- Mutual understanding and compassion; ability to go to each other for emotional support
- Enjoyment of each other's company
- Trust in one another
- Positive reciprocity — equal give-and-take between the two parties
- The ability to be oneself, express one's feelings and make mistakes without fear of judgement.
